TURKS MAKE ARMED FORAY INTO THRACE; CRISIS NEAR

Attitude At Lausanne Stiffens With The Russians

ALLIES TO BALK

Want Russ Restricted To Questions Vital To Country

(Reuter's Service)

Lausanne, Nov. 30.—It is noteworthy that M. Veniselos today was absent from the Conference.

The Turks' attitude has stiffened since the arrival of the Russian delegates. It is understood that the Allies have decided to adhere to the decision to admit the Russians only to discussions of questions in which they are directly interested.

The First Commission after a long debate adopted the report of the sub-commission providing for the partial demilitarisation of the Southern Aegean islands. The Turks are making reservation in favor of more complete demilitarisation.

The question of the four northern islands will be discussed with the whole question of the Straits.

London, Nov. 30.—The Times' Constantinople correspondent states that the situation in Western Thrace is more grave. The insurgents are said to be the masters of the situation. An armed band of 5,000 with machine guns is moving to the South to Dedeagatch demanding a plebiscite.

London, Nov. 30.—There are signs of trouble brewing in Western Thrace. The Turkish reports of simultaneous revolt in three places have up to the present been largely discredited, but the derailment of the new Orient express between Adrianople and Lulebureas points to serious disturbances.

STATES CONDITIONS

London, Nov. 29.—In the House of Commons today Mr Bonar Law, replying to Mr Wedgewood, said that the main conditions specified on which the Government was prepared to recognise the Soviet Government were recognition of debt, restitution of property, effective compensation and cessation of political propaganda.

CANTON IS TOLD LONDON SHIES AT NEW LOAN

Agent Wires That Payment Of First Is Postponed By Cabinet Crisis

(China Press Service)

Canton, Nov. 29.—The Cantor Finance Administration is in receipt of a telegram from Mr. G. L Brander, who recently returned to London after concluding on behalf of the Anglo-French China Corporation three loans, aggregating £6,000,000, with the Canton Government. The telegram says that owing to the Cabinet crisis in London, a postponement of the payment of the first loan, namely, the currency reform loan, for a period of sixty days is rendered necessary. Mr. Brander calls attention to an article in the loan contract which provides that payment of the loan may be postponed in the event of the occurrence of any unexpected "hindrance."

Mr. Brander adds that the loan bonds (will be!) enthusiastically subscribed by the British public.

House Amends The Ship Subsidy Bill

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 30.—It is reported from Washington that the House of Representatives before passing the Ship Subsidy Bill amended it so that the amount for subsidy purposes must be voted annually.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Senator Jones, Chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, has called a meeting for Monday to begin consideration of the Ship Subsidy Bill which will probably be presented to the Senate at an early date.

BY J. L. BUTTS

According to Dan Yoong-hei, it was primarily a question of the proprieties, which he considered to have been very much outraged by Yang Foh-ching and Hyui Ah-sei.

Dan was occupying the prisoners' dock at the Mixed Court. On the night previous, he related to the Court, he and all his household, which included several boarders, had been earnestly engaged in slumber in their domicile on Chaoufoong Road when the two complainants aforementioned had violently assaulted the front door and began making themselves a vocal nuisance to the whole district. It was very late, almost midnight, but Dan had shivvered into a few garments and gone down to find out what those unprincipled callers required at such an hour. They told him that they wished to see one of his boarders. He explained that the boarder was asleep and as he was a hard-working man and needed his rest he was reluctant to arouse him unless the matter was urgent. He suggested they return next day. At this, said Dan, the two became angry, tried to force their way into the house and attacked him with fist and foot. The uproar attracted a policeman and they were all taken to the station, where Yang and Hyui turned in a majority report in which the witness figured as the sole transgressor.

Yang and Hyui and the policeman demurred to this recounting. Yang stated that aside from the statement that he and Hyui had called at the Dan residence the story of the defendant was a disgusting mess of fabrication. He had gone to the place, accompanied by Hyui to see a friend of his who is a carpenter and whose services are required next morning. He denied that the hour was unduly late. It was only about 11 o'clock. He denied even more emphatically that the Dan household was asleep... quite to the contrary, they were so much awake that it was impossible for some time for himself and friend to make their advent known. Dan and his friends were gambling and the din of the uniquitous domino drowned out their heaviest knocks. When Dan finally did come to the door he insulted the callers verbally, slammed the door in their faces, and then went inside, rallied his friends, picked up a stool and led a mass attack on witness and Hyui. Yang exhibited fragments of a stool and a large globular swelling on his head as further evidence.

Hyui said about the same thing and stated further that his presence in Court was only due to awkwardness in the manipulation of a cleaver by one of Dan's fellow-gamblers.

The policeman also testified to the number and hostility of Dan's backers, so the Court read Dan a strong sermon on the virtues of truthfulness and courtesy to strangers and fined him $10.

WEATHER NOTE

The arrival of chill weather has a number of sequels in the Mixed Court. One of them was Tsang Ah-kung.

Tsang dropped into the lodging house of Woo Ah-sz at 1111 Hanbury Road the other evening and booked a bed for the night. Next morning he slipped out very quietly, barely nodding to mine host as he passed. Woo had a sudden premonition of ill and dashed back to look at his late guest's bed. Sure enough, the bed cover was missing. Woo was so prompt in advertising his loss that the corner policeman grasped the import of his yells and Tsang in rapid sequence.

When they inventoried Tsang they found the bed cover wrapped snugly about him, beneath his other wear. He hadn't intended stealing it, he said. He had just borrowed it because the morning was cold.

Two days' exemption from exposure for Tsang.

American Sojourners Here Give Thanks For Mercies Vouchsafed During Year

Dr. Sherwood Eddy Delivers Address On Thanksgiving Citing Awful Moloch Of Industrialism In Shanghai

The American community gathered yesterday morning at eleven o'clock in Holy Trinity Cathedral to attend a special Thanksgiving service arranged in compliance with President Harding's proclamation.

The Cathedral, which had been granted through the courtesy of the trustees, was filled to capacity not only with Americans, but by other nationals. A special section on the right of the nave was reserved for members of the American company of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps, who attended in a body.

After the organ prelude played by Mr. R. C. Young, the congregation rose and sang a hymn "Harvest Home." The Thanksgiving Proclamation, issued by President Harding, was then read by Mr. Edwin S. Cunningham, U. S. Consul General. The congregation read the 145th Psalm responsively, led by the Rev. W. H. Lacy, D. D. Dr. F. L. Hawks Pott, President of St. John's University, offered a beautiful prayer of Thanksgiving for mercies and blessings throughout the past twelve months concluding with The Lord's Prayer, in which all joined.

DR. EDDY SPEAKS

Dr. G. Sherwood Eddy delivered the Thanksgiving day address, emphasising the cause for thanksgiving. The savage seldom said "Thank you," but as civilisation advanced they recognised the need of acknowledgment, and this increased mutual good-will. After making a brief review of world conditions—of war to end war—the speaker quoted his experiences with the army of the Christian General Feng.

Reverting to our thankfulness for commercial power and prestige, and quoting Judge Gary on the wealth of the American nation, Doctor Eddy alluded to industrial conditions in this neighborhood, citing the case of the match factory where lads were employed for 15 hours a day for seven days a week. Enormous profits were being made, and human lives were burned up for this money. The employer at that place, he said, could not stand up and give thanks for his profits which had been made at the cost of human life unless he was a Pharisee without a conscience. The speaker urged the spirit of sharing with those who toil.

Proceeding, Doctor Eddy dealt at some length and in a graphic manner with his tour of several mills and factories in this city between 4 and 5 yesterday morning. At the first factory he was in time to see the changing of the night shift. There were moving scenes: the mother, with her little bound feet, had made 26 cents after a long shift of 12 hours, and was leading away her little girl 12 years who had earned 13 cents during those 12 hours. She, was also carrying in her arms her little babe, but she struggled on and out from that great factory.

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL IS ROCK IN THE FAIRWAY

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Nov. 30.—Doubt is expressed as to whether the Senate will be able to pass the Ship Subsidy Bill before the adjournment on December 3 owing to the persistent continuation of the Democrat filibuster against the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill.

It is believed that the possibility of the formation of a new political bloc party is indicated by the announcement of a progressive conference on December 1 which will be attended by 13 Senators and 26 members of the House of Representatives.

The conference is convened by Senator La Follette and Republican member of the House of Representatives, Mr. Huddleston.

CALEDONIANS MAKE MERRY AT TOWN HALL

"And mony a night we've merry been,
And mony mae we hope to be!"

The Caledonian Ball which was held last night in the Town Hall proved one of the most brilliant events of the Shanghai social season. There was a large attendance of Shanghai's prominent residents and youth and beauty turned out in force to enjoy this brilliant annual function.

The skirling bagpipes played by Corporal Tam Highland really rendered the famous airs of Scotia's banks and braes and roused the thrill of pride of race that makes the Scottish blood run faster.

The arrangements for the festival were superbly handled, the buffet supper and refreshments being carried out to the highest degree of efficiency.

A vote of thanks, silent but none the less sincere, was given the committee by the delighted company who enjoyed the hospitality of St. Andrew's Society last night.

Life In San itarium Has Many Nuts; Some Cracked

By Elsie McCormick

U.S.A., October 30.

Dear Mr. Editor;

This is just to let you know that we are in a sanitarium. No, not in the mental ward, although our state of mind when we discovered that the narrowest Irish crochet retails at $1.75 a yard gold made us almost eligible. They are wearing whole cascades of Irish crochet on the net fronts which go with tailored suits. As for us, we can only look and mourn for all the lace collars that we speeded hastily down the steps last summer in our little gray home in Kuling.

However, there are all kinds of nuts in this place, from grape to human. Also are samples of the 150 kinds of breakfast foods invented at Battle Creek, but as they all taste alike we don't knock down more than three people in our morning rush to the dining-room. Our chief consolation is that the cream which goes with it tastes as if it really came from a cow and not from the inside of a Ford. They won't let us have fish because that is supposed to be unclean, although we don't see how, considering the excellent bathing facilities which all but stuffed fish enjoy. One of the things they most need here is an orchestra in the dining-room, the reason being that everybody eats zwelbach and the general effect is that of a hard day in a gravel-pit. A large, wide fortune awaits the inventor of a noiseless zwelbach.

CALL OF THE YEAST

Another thing they won't let us have is coffee. Instead, we are allowed something called caramel malt coffee, which anybody take for Java, provided he had never tasted the original article. In place of afternoon tea we have grape-juice, but as we forgot to bring up any raisins, we don't have nearly as good a time as we might otherwise have enjoyed. This reminds us that a lady here whose husband is fond of making home-brew described him as having succumbed to the lure of the yeast.

They have another dish which they call nut steak. This is appropriately named, because anyone who mistook it for steak would certainly be a nut. There is a petrified forest nearby and they often serve us pieces of it (though they are usually billed on the menu as health breads.

However, we must admit that we are thriving. In fact, we picked up three pounds the first day we were here, but we had to put them down again because they belonged to one of the pulleys in the gymnasium.

The institution also has a system of therapeutic baths. In China, food must be boiled. Here they boil us instead and then let us eat things uncooked.

SYMPTOMATIC RHYMES

We have often wondered since we came here why a person undergoing treatment is known as a "patient." Practically all we have met are the most impatient individuals imaginable. There is an old lady who parks herself every day under our window and we know her symptoms so well that we could put them in rhyme and set them to music. Everybody's digestion seems to be public property and we usually find out a person's blood pressure before we learn his name. Each patient has from three to thirty-six assorted symptoms, and they never mention them except from breakfast time until they go to bed. However, we feel much better since we came here, one of the reasons being that after hearing all the ailments of the others, we feel that anyone as husky as we are ought to be out in the back-ward sawing wood.

As the only entertainment here is an occasional lecture on

BRITAIN LEADS IN BREAKING UP OF BATTLESHIPS

Proper Evidence Of Good Faith Is Argument Of Mr. Monsell

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 29.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Eyres Monsell, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, replying to Viscount Curzon, stated that under the Washington Treaty eight British capital ships had already been delivered to shipbreaking firms and six more had been rendered incapable of warlike service. Two more would have been similarly dealt with by December 31.

He pointed out that, until all the Powers ratified the Treaty—which France and Italy hitherto had not done—no one was bound to dispose of vessels.

Mr. Monsell disagreed with the suggestion that his answer disclosed the serious fact that we had scrapped every ship except the Lion, while other nations had done nothing. He though it right that Britain should give a lead in good fairth and demonstrate her intention to carry out the Treaty. He undertook, however, not to deal with further ships until other countries had acted.

Java Sugar Men Look For Ships To Take The Crop To Europe

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 29.—Inquiries are being made in the freight markets for tonnage to transport the new sugar crop in Java to Europe. Merchants yesterday indicated a rate of 32/6d. per ton for loading in January but, as the East and the Far East appear to be over-supplied with tonnage, expressed the opinion that it would be doubtful if transport would be forthcoming on those terms.

LETTER CLUE ELIMINATED; MURDER YET IS MYSTERY

Blood Stained Envelope Fails To Identify Goldenberg Slayer

WRITER FOUND

Police Also Learn Indian Opened Door At 5; Did Not Lock It

Still baffled, but doggedly persistent in their attempts to solve the mystery of the murder of Bernard Goldenberg, manager of the Victoria Theater, Chief William Armstrong's operatives made some headway in their investigation yesterday when they eliminated one theory that for a time appeared to be a highly important clue.

When police searched the bedroom of his apartments after they had been called to the theater and found Mr. Goldenberg murdered, they discovered two letters, one slightly spattered with blood.

Mr. Goldenberg's body was lying just inside the door where, as it is assumed, he fell when struck from behind as he reached to turn on the electric light. A few feet away was his overcoat which he had carried up the stairs when last seen by friends in the lobby. The two letters were on the floor close by the body.

LETTER CLUE

One letter, slightly spotted with blood, was written in poor Spanish and as it was not addressed to Mr. Goldenberg, not signed by him, and carried no reference to him, it was thought probable that the letter might have been dropped by the murderer. Finger prints on the letter failed to reveal anything, however, and after several days' studying of the letter's contents, which needed translation and deciphering, police located the writer and addressee.

The letter was of no consequence and had been given to Mr. Goldenberg by an employe of one theater to be given to the employe of another theater under Mr. Goldenberg's management.

Police made a thorough investigation of all circumstances before giving out information that any letter or letters had been found.

What may be the key to the mystery of how the murderer or murderers of the theater manager escaped from the theater after slaying and robbing him was also unearthed yesterday when it was learned that the Indian watchman at the front door opened the door sometime around 5 o'clock and went back to sleep without locking up again.

THE ESCAPE

Inquiry led to the disclosure that the Indian, who sleeps just inside the front door on a cot, always opens the door about that time to admit the milkman, and never locks the door after he receives the milk. Assuming that Mr. Goldenberg was killed sometime about midnight the murderer or murderers could have remained hidden, either in the room or in the theater itself, until the watchman opened the door and went back to sleep, and then slipped out without detection.

If the motive for the killing was revenge, it is assumed the murderers knew a great deal of Mr. Goldenberg's habits, and also of the watchman's habit of unlocking the door. Until the information became known police were mystified as to how the murderer escaped as the only two entrances or exits are from the front, past the watchman, or through the 'boy's' room in the rear.

The Indian, who is still being questioned by the police, sticks to his story with dogged determination that he saw Mr. Goldenberg early Monday morning. He has wavered only in the exact time which he first said was 7 o'clock, and later modified to between 6 and 7 o'clock, as he carries no watch.

Repeatedly questioned and cross-questioned by the police, however, he still maintains that Mr. Goldenberg knocked on the ticket-office door early Monday morning, spoke to him, and that he (the watchman) gave Mr. Goldenberg two letters or messages, one of which was handed back to him. Mr. Goldenberg then left the theater, he said. The Indian had no intimation that Goldenberg had returned

...th he was found dead, he maintains.

The Indian's statement has proved the most damning evidence the police have uncovered as it directly contradicts their theory that Mr. Goldenberg was killed when he first went up stairs as the overcoat near by, the fact that the bed had not been slept in, the burning light, and other certainties apparently bear out.

The detectives have uncovered many leads, in fact so many that they have been handicapped at getting at the crux of the mystery because of the multiplicity of conflicting statements, occurrences and rumors, each of which needs sifting, tracing down, eliminating or following up by a more detailed and minute examination. Chief Armstrong of the Department of Criminal Intelligence, and Detective Inspectors Trosser, Reyes and Cruickshanks, who ... direct charge of the case, and a number of assistants, are working night and day on every possible rumor and clue that it turned up, however, and are confident that the headway they are making will result in the eventual apprehension of the murder or murderers.

IS FOURTH KILLING

The Goldenberg murder is the fourth murder in which a foreigner has been killed during the seven months just ended in Shanghai.

The first murder occurred during a fight in the Tivoli Bar between American and Italian sailors in which several Americans were stabbed by the Italian bluejackets, one of whom died a short time later. The murderer of the American gob is the only one of the three murders preceding the Goldenberg murder, who escaped.

The second murder of the year came when Mrs. Grace Snyder, just landed at the Customs jetty on a trip around the world which included a short stop at Shanghai, was shot and killed by two Koreans who made an attempt to assassinate Baron General Tanaka as he passed through Shanghai on the same vessel. Both Koreans were captured, but one escaped from the Japanese Consular jail and has never been recaptured despite vigilant efforts by the Japanese police and the offer of a large reward.

In the third murder, which was a double tragedy, a Russian woman was shot and killed in the Eleganto millinery and gown shop on The Broadway, near the Astor House, by a former sweetheart, who committed suicide after shooting down the woman he loved.

"Adam And Eva"

The trouble in the garden of Eden is supposed to have commenced when the serpent entered. In the case of Adam and Eva all their worries began when the serpent—in this case Father—left the garden to go to South America and left his business manager Adam Smith to run his home and be a father to the family. Adam had never known a home of his own and he longed for the loving family circle and all it meant. He learned but of course it was very unfortunate when the King family woke up one morning and found themselves—instead of being near millionaires—having to go and work on a chicken ranch.

Still everything worked out well and the fortune comes back after the hard work has done the family a lot of good and all the misunderstandings are forgotten—and they live happy ever after.

Tim Frawley was excellent in the role of James King, the head of the family; while Bernard Nedell although he did very well, somehow or other reminded one of an automobile salesman who once tried to persuade a wife to purchase a second hand flivver. He had no idea of punctuation and his words were without any sign of heart in his part.

The play was good—as good as anything Shanghai can expect and Tim Frawley was the guiding genius. It is a pity he did not appear in the entire three acts. His presence would have added the pep which was so sadly lacking in the second act.

Peace Patched Up Between Chihli And Fengtien, Reported

(China Press Service)

Peking, Nov. 29.—An apparently inspired report states that the "peace" negotiations between the Chihli and Fengtien factions are being brought to a successful conclusion by Gen. Pao Kwei-ching and Yuan Kin-kai, who have for some time been mediating between the rival militarists.

A draft peace treaty is reported to have been agreed upon by Gen. Chang Tso-lin, Gen. Kun and Gen. Wu Pei-fu.

Mme. Isis Freed From British Court Summons

Charges that Madame Isis, fortune-teller and palmist, violated an ancient British law against fortune-telling, were dismissed in the British Court yesterday when Judge Peter Grain upheld the contention of Mr. H. D. Rodger, her attorney, that, since her marriage to an American, she was no longer a British subject and therefore not subject to the jurisdiction of the British Court.

Madame Isis, was formally charged with obtaining $10 from Mr. George Albert Carpenter by unlawfully pretending and professing that she could tell his fortune.

FOR MIXED COURT

The Judge decided that the charge be dismissed on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction. As far as he could see the only jurisdiction it could come under was that of the Chinese mixed tribunal, as that Court dealt with people who were unrepresented by Consular authority.

Mr. Rodger pointed out that under the Chinese law this was no offence. When that statute was contemplated he felt sure it was not meant to apply to ladies of that sort.

The Judge referred to recent decisions and it was held that nobody could tell a fortune and if they did tell a fortune they were deceiving.

Mr. H. D. Rodger appeared for the defendant and Mr. R. C. Faithfull represented the Police.

Mr. Rodger said they wished to plead jurisdiction. He wished to prove first of all that the defendant was married to an American and under those circumstances he would respectfully submit that under British law she was no longer a British subject and no longer amenable to the jurisdiction of that Court.

The Judge: You will prove the marriage?

Mr. Rodger: Yes, sir, by putting in a document.

Wm. F. Wallace, aged 42, said he was a moving picture agent. He produced a passport which was issued to him in Manila as an American subject.

The Judge: You are a citizen of the United States? Yes.

Natural born citizen? Yes, I was born in Brooklyn, New York.

SHOWS HER "LINES"

Witness produced the marriage certificate, the wedding having taken place last Tuesday. The lady's professional name was Madame Isis.

The Judge: That is the lady against whom the charge is brought? Yes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Faithfull: How long have you known this lady? Six or seven months.

Did you meet her in America or Manila? No, in Singapore.

I take it before you met her you were single or a widower? I am a single man.

Never been married before? Never before.

She was served with this summons last Monday? Yes.

I suppose it was not a long time before she told you about it? She told me at once.

You live at the same hotel? Yes.

IN DAILY VIEW

You see each other every day? Yes.

What day did the idea of marriage first occur to you?

The Judge: It does not matter, Mr. Faithfull.

Mr. Faithfull accepted the decision if his Lordship overruled him. He was contending that this marriage—which he hoped would turn out capitally—had been entered into to defeat the ends of justice.

The Judge: Even if it were so we cannot help it. They have done it now.

Mr. Faithful: The idea of getting married only occurred to you at the time the summons was served and in order that the lady would be able to come here as an American citizen?

Witness: Do you desire me to answer that question?

Mr. Faithfull: Yes, that is why I ask you the question?

PLANNED TO MARRY

Witness: The decision to be married was arrived at when we were in Bangkok. We were going to be married there but we then decided to get married on my birthday, December 23.

The Judge: That was some time ago?

Witness: Yes, four months ago.

Then Mr. Wallace proceeded to state that he had made inquiries here as to the status of the lady who married an American citizen, and had interviewed Vice-Consul Sawyer on the matter and the latter had talked to Mr. Cunningham. Mr. Sawyer spoke of the new statue and said he thought the instructions were on the way.

Mr. Faithfull: Does he know what are the instructions?

Mr. Wallace said he knew that when an American married a white woman abroad she was to be protected to the same extent as the wife of an American citizen.

YES, BY PROTECTION

But not as an American citizen herself? Yes, by protection.

The Judge remarked that as the American law stood the defendant was still a British subject.

Mr. Wallace said that the Consular authorities would not grant a passport to his wife as yet.

Mr. Rodger added that they did not know if the law would pass. It had to go to the Supreme Court yet.

The Judge: It may be overruled and they might decide that it is ultra vires.

Mr. Rodger: And unconstitutional.

The Judge: Yes, that's the word, unconstitutional. Under the law she is not an American subject.

Mr. Faithfull was prepared to argue that she was amenable to British jurisdiction.

Mr. Rodger inquired when witness first saw Mr. Sawyer regarding the marriage proposal.

Witness: The day after we arrived in Shanghai—the 28th ult.

And you did not get this summons until last Monday, the 27th? No.

Mr. Rodger said he wished the question to be asked as to the marriage being consummated as an evasion of jurisdiction, as the impression might exist in Shanghai that such was the case.

Mr. Faithfull remarked that they were entitled to so assume until the facts had been proved. Counsel proceeded to argue that the lady, at the time this alleged offence was committed, was a British subject and they were entitled to bring her into that Court.

IS SHE BRITISH?

The Judge: Why? Do you say that she is still a British subject as regards this Court?

Mr. Faithfull: At the time of the offence she was a British subject.

The Judge: It does not matter. She is so now so far as this Court is concerned.

Mr. Faithful asked that his Lordship should adjudicate on the offence.

The Judge: On what ground?

Mr. Faithfull: That she was a British subject when she committed the offence.

The Judge pointed out that the lady might have married a Frenchman, and they would have no jurisdiction over her. They would have no power to bring her into Court.

Mr. Faithfull: If that is your decision—

The Judge said it was not his decision, but he wanted counsel to state how they could bring a lady into the Court suppose she had married a Frenchman. They had extra-territoriality in China.

Mr. Faithfull added that in such a case as a lady marrying a Frenchman it would be a poser.

The Judge quoted the law as it was enforced in that Court: "the wife of a British subject shall be deemed to be a British subject and the wife of an alien shall be deemed to be an alien." How are we to get over that.

Mr. Faithfull: And it describes an alien.

The Judge: According to the Act of Parliament an alien is anyone who is not a British subject. That is what an alien means.

Mr. Faithfull said he had no alternative but to withdraw the proceedings.

GREEK PRESTIGE GONE

London, Nov. 29.—The Cabinet this morning is understood to have discussed the position created by the Greek executions. The British Minister, Mr. F. O. Lindley, will call at Lausanne while en route to London from Athens, to see Lord Curzon.

The British view is that the Greek Government's barbarous action will tremendously lower Grek prestige at Lausanne and all over the world but it is declared that it will not interfere with the inter-Allied decisions which have already been taken at the Peace Conference.

Paris, Nov. 29.—The newspapers deny that in consequence of the breaking off of diplomatic relations the British delegates at Lausanne can no longer meet the Greek delegates.

AMERICA DENIES OIL PLAYS PART IN PALESTINE

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Nov. 30.—The State Department denies the report that it made special efforts to aid the Standard Oil Company to obtain oil rights in Palestine and declares that the only action in this connection concerns the Mandate, notes requesting equal opportunities in mandated territories.

In regard to Palestine it only gave such help as would be given to any American citizen to secure British recognition of the Company's legal rights.

Sikhs Crowd Mixed Court As Captain Barrett Takes Exception To 'Liar' Charge

A large proportion of the Sikh community of Shanghai, including members of the Municipal police force and civilians, gathered at the Mixed Court yesterday for vindication in connection with a remark passed in the Court last week when Mr. R. S. Haskell declared in the course of a police case that "all Sikhs are liars."

The upper courtroom was crowded to the doors with the Sikhs as Captain E. I. M. Barrett, Assistant Commissioner of Police in charge of the Sikh Branch, rose before Assessor King and Magistrate Loh to take exception to Mr. Haskell's statement.

"With your permission," Capt. Barrett said, "I would like to draw the attention of the Court to certain remarks which were made by Mr. Haskell during the hearing of a stabbing case in which two men were charged before this Court last Thursday. Mr. Haskell is quoted by the newspapers to have said 'all Sikhs are liars.' From the notes of the case he is said to have quoted a previous British Assessor, Mr. Grant Jones, as having said that 'all Sikhs are liars.' These remarks, I may state, have given grave offense to the Sikh community. I consider it is not fair. Because one man may have told lies that is no reason for branding the whole Sikh community.

"I ask the Court to order Mr. Haskell to appear in court and withdraw the remarks. With regard to the remarks said to have been made by Mr. Grant Jones, whether he ever did make such a remark, it was never brought to my attention. Had it been I should have done the same thing which I have done in this instance. In fairness to Mr. Haskell I must state that he has seen me and was apologised to me for the remarks, which he said were not meant in a general sense. He asked me to convey to the Sikhs and also to the Court his apology and he also expressed his willingness to appear in court and withdraw the remarks."

Assessor King, replying, said that he remembered the incident very clearly.

"Mr. Haskell, who appeared for the two accused," he said, "stated in effect that the case against his clients depended on the evidence of Sikh Police Constable 278, that even a former Assessor of the Mixed Court, Mr. Grant Jones, had remarked in regard to Sikh policemen, 'They are all liars,' and that the Court should therefore find the accused not guilty. Sub-Inspector Mackenzie then said that the police resented the remarks of Mr. Haskell, and added that he had noticed in the past that when Sikh policemen appeared as witnesses for Mr. Haskell the latter had made no remarks as to their being liars.

"The Court showed clearly what it thought of Mr. Haskell's remarks," the Assessor continued, "by stating that it was fully satisfied as to the guilt of the accused, and sentencing them to imprisonment. The incident seems to be of so little importance that the Court does not consider it necessary to take any further action, particularly as the Court sentenced the accused immediately after Mr. Haskell's uncalled-for remarks and seeing that Mr. Haskell has apologised to you, Captain Barrett, personally and has asked that his apology be conveyed to the Sikhs and to the Court."

tonsilitis, we are almost as far from the madding theatrical and musical world as we were in Shanghai. We have learned one or two things, however. For instance, various rumors from America had caused us to think that the art of the silver screen was passing slowly but surely toward the door marked "Exit." We imagined that the public, revolted by the alleged orgies of Hollywood and bored by plots that were as apparent as a corset-steel on an X-ray photograph, had turned from the evil screen to the pure heights of ten, twenty, and thirty cent vaudeville. We saw with our mental eyes the darkened exterior of the motion picture palaces and the glimmer of electric signs down the street, where Vesta, the Beautiful Vest-Maker, was saved nightly from a fate worse than death.

BRUTAL BOOK-KEEPERS

We read that many moving-picture stars had had their salaries operated on by a cruel book-keeper, thus bringing their monthly compensation to a point as low as the salary received annually by the President of the United States. It seemed as if, for Mary Pickford and Bebe Daniels, the next step was the bread-line and then the river. In fact, we believed that the moving-picture industry was headed for oblivion as surely as a Democratic postmaster after the election of a Republican administration.

But did our imaginings prove to be true? No, no, not on your sepia photograph! The streets in front of the local homes of the two-dimensioned drama are choked nightly with queues of automobiles at least twice as long as when we left. Five minutes after we got off the boat, somebody asked us what we thought of Rudolph Valentino. We didn't know whether he was President of Mexico or a new kind of spaghetti, and the shocked expression which followed our confession of ignorance couldn't have been more marked if we had referred to London as the capital of the Argentine.

"But you must have seen Rudolph Valentino," our friend persisted. "He is the perfect lover." We remarked that any lover who had had enough practice to attain perfection didn't appeal to us. That didn't save us, however, from being dragged to half a dozen matinees, where we could witness this Shopgirl's Delight in action or from being presented with a year's back copies of a famous screen publication, so that we could become sufficiently informed to be fit again for human society.

Another cold shower greeted us when we were asked what we thought of the Wilkens murder. When we reluctantly confessed that we didn't know Wilkens had even contemplated murder, a friend looked at us with pitying contempt; then sighed and remarked, "Oh, well, you'll probably catch up on things bye-and-bye."

Well, perhaps we will, but as it is time to parboil us again, we can't do anything about it for the present. Hoping that you are the same, we remain,

Protosely yours,
The Lady Feature Writer.

Shanghai College Notes

Twenty-six students at Shanghai College decided to become Christians at a meeting held Sunday afternoon in the college chapel. The college has launched a campaign among its students along this line. With a very much large student body than ever before, a large part of whom are new students, the problem of properly amalgamating them in thought and ideals with the character of the institution became a serious one.

One object of the college is the promotion of Christianity in China. After a series of special addresses at morning chapel by various members of the faculty and student body, Dr. Stanley Jones was invited to speak to the students last Saturday morning, and twice on Sunday.

On Saturday Dr. Jones took for his subject: The Need for Moral Character in the Development of a Nation. By means of a series of striking charts Dr. Jones compared China with other nations as to area, population, education, natural resources, railways, increase of wealth, etc. He spoke of the avaricious greed of certain officials and the ravages of the soldiery as the greatest curses of the land. With 1,500,000 soldiers China has a larger standing army than any other country in the world, yet she is not at war with any nation.

On Sunday, at the close of the afternoon meeting an opportunity was given to all students to sign cards, signifying their desire to become Christians or their intention of studying the matter further. There were twenty-six of the former and nine of the latter.

At present there are 560 students in the institution, of whom about one-half are Christians. In the college department about three-fourths are Christians; of the sixty-one in the two upper classes all but four are Christians; while all the thirty-one seniors are Christians. This shows the trend toward Christianity as the students remain longer in the institution.

MORE PROTESTS AT ARREST OF MR. FU SIAO-EN

Telegrams Sent To Cabinet And President Tell Of His Achievements

On account of the order for the arrest of Fu Siao-en, head of the China Merchants' Steamer Navigation Co., the Ningpo Chamber of Commerce and the Co-operative Society of Communication in the Districts of Ninghsien, Chuchi and Chinghai have sent the following two telegrams to the President and the Cabinet:

"1.—To the President and the Cabinet: Fu Chung-yao (i.e. Fu Siao-en), a native of Ningpo, residing at Shanghai as a merchant, is a zealous and public spirited man, who has made special efforts during recent yeare in alleviation of famine conditions in Chekiang Province. No clear publication of his alleged crimes has been given in the mandate of the 14th which appeared in the newspapers nor has proper procedure of ordinary appeal been adopted. The order of arrest was issued suddenly and prematurely. The people have lost their protection in their personal liberty and great surprise exists among them. Therefore we request that a clear statement regarding the case be announced so that the people's rights can be protected and public suspicion dissolved. This is what we earnestly expect. Resectfully submitted.

"Chamber of Commerce,
"Ningpo, Chekiang.

"2.—To the President and the Cabinet: Fu Siao-en, a Ningpo merchant residing at Shanghai, has won reputation and public approval for his management of the activities and welfare of communication. He is the pioneer promoter of motor truck services in the three districts of Chinghsien, Chuchi and Chinghai. Without investigating the real evidence as to the charges, the mandate of the 14th appeared in newspapers suddenly and prematurely. Violation of law is now made by the officials while the shadows of public suspicion appear in the heart of the people. As a result great surprise exists among the people.

"Therefore we earnestly request that a clear statement regarding the case be announced in order to protect industry and the people's rights. Respectfully submitted.

"Co-operative Society of Communication at Ninghsien, Chuchi and Chinghai, Chekiang."

CARDIFF BRINGS ANGLO-CHINESE EMBROGLIO UP

Commons Asked What To Do To Curb Drug Using By Laundrymen

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 29.—The question of the association of Chinese with English girls was brought before the House of Commons yesterday as the result of a sensation in Cardiff, where a Chinese laundryman had died, it is believed, owing to an overdose of opium, while three English girls in the same den narowly escaped with their lives.

There is growing resentment in South Wales as a result of these revelations and at a meeting of the Cardiff Guardians the Magistrate demanded the repatriation of every Chinese laundry worker.

Mr. Lougher, the member for East Cardiff, suggested that the Home Secretary and the police should have wider powers to inspect these premises to enable a closer scrutiny of drug importation, particularly in seaport towns.

Mr. Bridgeman replied that the question was being considered in connection with a bill to amend the Dangerous Drugs Act.

Mr. Shinwell declared that the presence of Chinese on British ships was largely responsible for the introduction of drugs.

London, Nov. 29.—Chinese from all parts of England and Wales held a meeting at Cardiff yesterday and strongly protested against the hostility displayed towards them as the result of the publicity given to the tragedy of the Cardiff laundry. The Chinese complain that the women thrust themselves upon them.

TUNG KANG IN LONDON TELLS OF CHINA WOES

Uphill Job Of Republic Is Made Clear; Wants The Mixed Court Ended

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 29.—Mr. Tung Kang, President of the Supreme Court of Peking, in the course of an interview in London, said that although the new Government of China had necessarily an uphill task it was doing reconstructive work.

He intimated his intention on his return of urging the Government to establish a publicity department charged with making the actual condition of China known to the Western peoples in the latter's language.

Mr. Tung said that he had arrived at the conclusion that a mistake had been made in adopting the Continental method of judicial procedure in China. He favored the adoption of the English methods. He was convinced, he said, that the result of the coming investigation of the International Commission appointed under the Washington Treaties would accelerate the disappearance of extraterritoriality. He would like to see the Mixed Court in Shanghai returned to the Chinese authorities.

In conclusion, Mr. Tung said that he fervently hoped that Britain would return at least the Boxer Indemnity for the education of Chinese students. He felt sure that closer Anglo-Chinese relationship would result from this.

Opium Plot Charges Against Ex-Senator Dismissed By Court

A former senator in the Kiangsu Provincial Parliament, Yih Soo-cur, was released by Assessor Allman and Magistrate Kwan after having been charged with organising a company to transport opium to Pinghu.

Yih, who was represented by Mr. H. D. Rodger and Mr. L. K. Kentwell, was arrested on a warrant issued by the Pinghu Magistrate. The Court held that a prima facie case had not been made out and dismissed the application that he be handed over to the Chinese authorities.

The Traffic Court heard twenty-eight cases yesterday, fines ranging from $3 to $30.

Peking, Nov. 29.—A mandate issued tonight accepts the resignations of Dr. Wang Chung-hui and his Cabinet and appoints the following new Cabinet:

Acting Premier and Minister of Finance, Mr. Wang Tah-hsieh.

Minister of the Interior, Mr. Kao Ling-wei.

Minister for Foreign Affairs, Dr. C. T. Wang.

Minister of Justice, Mr. Shu Shih-ying.

Minister of Education, Mr. Peng Yun-yi.

Minister of Commerce, Mr. Li Kun-yuan.

Minister of the Navy, Admiral Li Ting-hsin.

Minister of Communications, Mr. Kao Eng-hung.

The personnel of the new Cabinet is composed of members of the Yen Chiu Clique, the Waichiao Clique, the Paotingfu Clique, the Loyang Clique, the Yi Yiu Hsia and the Ching Hsueh Hui Parties.

Although Mr. Wang Ta-hsieh is reported to have agreed to accept the Premiership, it is unknown whether his colleagues will assume office. It is also uncertain whether the approval of Gen. Tsao Kun and Gen. Wu Pei-fu has been obtained. In view of the strenuous efforts being made by the opposition party in Parliament to eliminate Mr. Kao En-hung from the Cabinet, speculation is rife regarding the possibility of further attack on the "remnant of the Loyang faction."

WARSHIP STATUS OF POWERS TOLD TO THE COMMONS

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 29.—In the House of Commons today a question was asked as to the state of the present relative strengths of Britain, the United States and Japan in capital ships. Mr. Eyres-Monsell, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, replied that they were 23, 26 and 15 respectively, of which 1, 8 and 5 respectively were due to be scrapped.

The United States had 15 capital ships in course of construction, of which under the agreement only 2 could be completed as battleships and 2 allocated as air craft carriers.

The figures with regard to Japan were 4 building, 2 of which could be completed as battleships, and 2 to be scrapped.

It is understood that no further progress was being made with the ships being built in the United States and Japan which were to be scrapped.

Kenny Irle Hero Of Thanksgiving Day Gridiron Battle

'MAL' DROPKICKS

Hirsch Also Stars For Heavier And Older Team

BY TOMMY GRAFTON

Even school spirit couldn't check the march of Shanghai's gridiron warriors yesterday, and the civilians won, 10 to 0.

Shanghai's offence was featured by the great playing of Kenny Irle and "Mal" Maloney, who did a vast amount of ground gaining during the afternoon. Irle gave a splendid exhibition of broken field running, and seemed able to tear through the S.A.S. line at will, bringing despair to the School ends, who could not fathom his attack. Coach Edmunds pleaded with his men to stop Irle, but it was easier said than done, and Kenny kept on.

Maloney showed wonderful form in his line plunges and kicks. In the last quarter his beautiful field goal from the 33-yard line was one of the prettiest plays of the game, and he was often able to gain many yards through the School line, which proved rather weak during the early part of the game.

The School was handicapped early in the game, when Roy Squires, the School's heaviest man, was forced from the game with a broken nose. Here Harold Brewster, who is one of the grittiest little quarterbacks Shanghai ever saw, rallied his team together in a heroic effort to save the day. It was a black moment for the S.A.S., but Woods ably filled the gap in the backfield, and the School held better than was expected.

Shanghai displayed beautiful interference, and the School ends had a hard time breaking through. The civilians outweighed the schoolboys by twenty or thirty pounds, and brushed by them in a convincing manner. The School had no opportunity to make use of their trick plays as they were constantly in the danger zone, where a mistake would mean a touchdown. Brewster was forced to kick out of danger every time the S.A.S. got the ball.

Coach Edmunds made a pathetic appeal to his boys at half time, urging them to fight on grimly against odds, and the team came back in the second half determined to do or die, and they held Shanghai for downs twice on their six-yard line. The civilians were unable to score another touchdown.

FIRST QUARTER

Maloney kicked off to Squires, who returned the ball to the School's 23-yard line. Parker and McGinnis gained 7 yards by line bucks. Maloney returned Brewster's punt to the 35-yard line, where Squires pounced on the pigskin after a fumble. Rawlinson's pass went over Brewster's head. It was the School's ball on her own 25-yard line. Brewster's punt was blocked, and a few moments later, Maloney crashed through the line for a touchdown. He drop-kicked goal for the additional point. Score: Shanghai 7, American School 0.

Maloney kicked off to Lawton, who was downed on the 30-yard mark. Parker gained 5 yards. Squires tossed the leather to Baker for an 8-yard advance. A double pass to Squires gained another 5. On the next play Parker dashed through center for three yards, and then gave the ball to Squires, who skirted left end for an additional 8 yards. Squires was hurt on the play, and was substituted by Woods. Brewster punted, and Shanghai marched 34 yards before the quarter ended, mainly with Jack Smith holding the ball. Shanghai 7, American School 0.

SECOND QUARTER

Maloney and Irle broke through the line for a total of 12 yards. Maloney's pass to Griffith grounded. Maloney attempted a drop-kick, but the ball went wild by inches. After McGinnis had gained one yard, Brewster punted to Shanghai's 40-yard line. Maloney uncorked a nifty pass to Schloss for a 30-yard gain. Maloney was thrown twice for a total loss of 13 yards. A series of forward passes was incompleted and the School got the ball. After Woods and McGinnis had gained 5 yards, Brewster punted to Maloney on Shanghai's 15-yard line, and the civilian fullback returned the ball

MR. J. B. FERRIER, who on last Sunday won the championship of the Shanghai Golf club for the third time, is scheduled for home leave a year from next summer, and if his present plans materialise he will enter the British Amateur championship as a representative of the local golf club.

And in this player the Shanghai Golf club, and in a larger sense, the whole Far East, will have a worthy representative, and one that will have an even chance of finishing at the top. The Shanghai champion has demonstrated on more than one occasion that he not only has a complete repertoire of shots in his bag, but that he is, in addition, a golfer of great brilliancy.

It is true that the Kiangwan course, upon which Mr. Ferrier has done his best work in recent years, is hardly of championship calibre, either in length or in the number and complexity of its hazards, particularly hazards around the greens. The putting areas on the local links are exceptionally large, and with a few exceptions they are not skirted or guarded by traps and bunkers of the sort that "homeside" players are called upon to negotiate in championship golf.

The Kiangwan fairways are unusually narrow, however, particularly on the holes outside of the race track, and the greens, while large, are not sloped in a manner to give encouragement to pitched approaches, which most high class golfers, notably Taylor in England and Chick Evans in America, regard as the most accurate and effective. At Kiangwan, due to hard, clayey soil of the greens, it is nearly always necessary to play run-up, or pitch and run shots to the pin, and these, unless they are very short, cannot be played with the same accuracy as pitches. To pitch a full mashie shot boldly onto the greens at Kiangwan would mean playing back from the rough on the other side nine times in ten, for no player in the world, not even Jock Hutchinson with his ribbed spade, could hold those flat, hard greens with a full pitch.

THUS IT CAN be seen that these low scores that Mr. Ferrier has been turning in were made under difficulties that are greater in the aggregate than he would encounter at home. The Shanghai champion is one of those hard, aggressive players whose natural inclination is to lash out with determination for his objective when he gets on a golf course, and there can be no doubt that the necessity for constant checking of himself when he gets near the greens, unconsciously imposed perhaps, adds anywhere from one to five strokes to his score every time he plays a round.

Mr. Ferrier has a free, easy and natural swing that would stamp him as a golfing stylist except for one little peculiarity—that of lifting his left heel a bit high when he drives. He usually gets a slight hook, both from the tee and in the fair-

Growth Of Basketball Here Described In Spalding Guide; Many Changes Made In Rules

The Spalding Official Basketball Guide for 1922-1923, which arrived in Shanghai on the President Jackson, contains several articles on the advances made by the game in various parts of China. Dr. John L. Gray, National Physical Director of the Young Men's Christian Association; R. A. Leake, of Foochow; W. E. Frantz of Hankow and Robert Forbes of Peking have contributed articles on basketball in his country.

The Guide contains a number of very important changes in the playing code.

Although basketball had been increasing in favor steadily with both player and spectator, it has been recognised that the game would be even more popular if a way could be devised to decrease foul throwing and the interruptions caused thereby. Too little distinction between flagrant fouls and accidental violations has been at the basis of the trouble. The penalty for an act of roughness which deprives an opponent of a well earned advantage in many cases has been penalised no more severely than a minor infraction such as an illegal dribble.

To remedy this condition a stiffer penalty has been provided for serious fouls and a lighter penalty for accidental violations.

A year ago a special committee was appointed to make a careful study of the subject. Under the direction of Dr. J. E. Raycroft the committee presented definite recommendations at the annual meeting, which resulted in two of the most radical changes in the rules that have been made in years. Some of the most common technical fouls such as running with the ball, illegal dribble and infraction of the "jump-ball" rule have been classified as violations, the penalty for which is loss of the ball. The ball is given to the offended team out of bounds, on the side, at the point nearest the spot where the violation was committed.

To increase the penalty for personal fouls and at the same time to clear up the confusion caused by the phrase, "in the act of throwing for goal," goal zones are established by extending the old free throw lines to meet the side lines. Whenever a personal foul is committed on a player who is in his own goal zone the penalty is two free throws.

The first of these important changes should decrease by thirty percent the number of free throws. The second, because of the severity of the penalty, should greatly lessen the number of personal fouls committed. Both changes will lighten the burden of the officials and make for uniformity in their work.

The "time out" rule has been changed slightly, the one minute clause for substitution in case of injury being eliminated. If a player is injured a "time out" is not charged if a substitution is made within two minutes. A captain may request time out whenever his team is in possession of the ball, as last year, and also whenever the ball is dead, except when out of bounds in possession of the opponents.

Numerous other minor changes have been made also.

The Guide proper contains all the usual features that have distinguished previous issues, including selections for the all-eastern, all-western and other sectional teams, pictures of leading teams, college records, lists of registered officials for the coming season and reviews from every section of the United States.

CRICKET IN AFRICA

(Reuter's Service)

Queenstown, Cape of Good Hope, Nov. 29.—In a two day match between a North Eastern XI and the M. C. C. the former made 53 runs. Kennedy (M. C. C.) took 6 wickets for 8 runs. The M. C. C. had made 90 for 2 wickets when stumps were drawn on account of rain.

Notes Of The Gridiron Battle

Kenny Irle proved himself a great football player yesterday afternoon. The basketball crack is not in the pink of condition and is not as hard as he should be to play the tough old American game. But sometime in the not so distant past Irle must been a whale of a quarterback.

Yesterday Kenny made several beautiful dashes through the line and gave a wonderful exhibition of broken field running. He intercepted two forward passes. When he relieved Jerry Neal at quarter, he ran the eleven as would a real field general. And if you were close to the play, you would realise that when Irle called signals he broked no interference.

Irle received a bad wallop on the head that made it necessary for him to leave the game. He had picked a forward pass out of the air and had put on all six, headed East to the American school goal line. Three men dove for him and Kenny put on more steam. The four crashed and Irle did not get up. He complained that there were more stars out than should be in the firmament at that time of the afternoon but after a short rest resumed play.

A few plays after the mixup Irle was experiencing difficulty in grasping the signals. He said he could not remember his own and asked Maloney. Mal told the referee about it and the latter blew his whistle, stopped play and called Dr. McCracken to look at the civilian star. The surgeon suggested that Irle leave the game. In the clubhouse after the game Irle could not remember what happened. It is hoped that the star basketball and football man will not suffer any ill effects from the collision.

The schoolboys should have won yesterday. Had they a better variety of plays and a little more knowledge of offensive play, they would have been on the long end. They

O'BRIEN IS WINNER OF EWO RACE

Rides Conqueror Dahlia To Victory In St. Andrew's Day Event

TAIPAN UNPLACED

Johnny Heard Second On Christmas Sale; Dallas Third

There was much wailing and gnashing of teeth, loud lamentations and horror-stricken prayers to St. Andrew, the patron saint of the Scots, when Mr. R. O'Brien, an Irishman bejabers, galloped home winner in the Ewo one mile handicap tiffin race at the Race Club yesterday on Conqueror Dahlia.

That an Irishman should win the premier sporting event of "Muckle Hoose" and on the very day most sacred to the Scottish saint was considered not only sacrilege, lese majeste and several epithets, but a downright error in the Scottish scheme of human affairs, especially when it is considered that the taipan himself, Mr. John Johnstone, was fourth, and consequently not in the money.

Twenty of the classiest racing ponies in Shanghai faced the starter after the usual libations had ensued in the club buffet, the jockeys and all been photographed in their rainbow tints, and the ladies, like maidens of ye olden dayes, had perched themselves in the grandstand and along the rails waving their favorite knights colors.

And the twenty ponies were mounted by twenty as fine lads as the Ewo can boast, some of them, including the taipan himself, numbered among the premier jockeys of the local courses to the 47-yard mark, by a sensational run through a half dozen tacklers. McGinnis returned Maloney's punt to midfield. Brewster pushed through to Shanghai's 48-yard line, and the half ended with the ball in possession of the School. Score: Shanghai 7, S.A.S. 0.

THIRD QUARTER

Maloney kicked off to Brewster, who returned the ball to the 49-yard line. Maloney plowed through for 5 yards, and Irle dashed around end for 9 more. Neal gained 5 yards, and Jack Smith added 3. The School got the ball on a fumble, and Brewster made a remarkable punt to Shanghai's 10-yard line, Brewster downed Smith after the latter had gained 4 yards. Maloney gained 3 yards, and Irle punted to Parker, who was down on the 40-yard line. Irle intercepted Parker's pass and raced to the 15-yard line before Woods tackled him. Maloney tossed three forward passes, all of which grounded, and the School was penalised 15 yards when McDaniel tackled the end before he had received the ball. Maloney attempted an end run after three line bucks had failed to gain. The School had held the heavier team for downs on the 6-yard line, and got the ball. Brewster punted to Irle, who returned the ball to the 25-yard line. McGinnis intercepted Maloney's pass on the School's 10-yard line, and Brewster again punted out of danger. Score: Shanghai 7, S.A.S. 0.

FOURTH QUARTER

Brewster downed Maloney after he had gained 10 yards. Shanghai failed to gain on the next three plays and Maloney punted over the goal line. The School was unable to break through Shanghai's heavy line, and Brewster punted out of bounds. Maloney gained 3 yards through tackle. Smith smashed through for 4. Maloney swept around end for another 10 yards. His pass to left end was incompleted. Parker intercepted a second pass on the School's 20-yard line. McGinnis gained five yards on two plays, and Brewster punted to midfield. Maloney tried a couple of passes, and then punted to Parker, who was nailed on the 2-yard line. Brewster punted from behind the goal line to Smith, who returned the ball to the 17-yard mark. The School made a heroic stand, and finally secured the ball. Brewster punted to Neal, who was brought down on the S.A.S. 42-yard line. Maloney punted over the goal line. Brewster's punt was blocked, and Shanghai secured the ball. With three minutes to play, Maloney drop-kicked a field goal from the 33-yard line. Score: Shanghai 10, School 0.

Brewster kicked off to Maloney who returned the ball to midfield. With a few seconds to play, Maloney attempted a series of forward passes and end runs, which failed to gain appreciably and the game was over.

Final score: Shanghai 10, American School 0.

The line-ups were as follows:

way—a sure indication that his left hand is over the shaft as it should be. His back swing is quick, and in going through he puts his shoulder under and into the ball in a manner to insure both distance and direction.

Another thing that has handicapped this player in his games here is the lack of stiff competition. He so far outranks the average run of players with whom he competes locally that subconsciously he lets up, whereas if he were playing men to whom he would find himself "down" occasionally, instead of being practically always "up" there would be a little more concentration, a little more care, and consequently a little better results.

Mr. Ferrier is a better match than medal player, and match play is what counts in championship golf at home. With sixty-four qualifying via the medal route it doesn't take much out of the ordinary to get into the charmed circle, and once in that company the local player would be in his element.

IT IS TOO BAD, really, that Mr. Ferrier will have to wait two years for his first go at the home cracks. He is 34 now, and while two years shouldn't make much difference to a golfer, theoretically, it remains a practical fact that the young men are pushing the older ones aside in the big golfing competitions at home. In America last summer both the open and amateur championships were won by youths of twenty.

It would be a fine and tremendously big thing for Shanghai and the whole Far East if Mr. Ferrier could go home and win a championship. It would be almost too much to hope for, but with those who have seen him in action—particularly last Sunday—the conviction is firm that he would have a good chance, if not of winning, at least of finishing very high in the race.

ACTING PREMIER WANG ASSUMES OFFICE DUTIES

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 30.—Mr. Wang Tah-hsieh assumed office this morning. Most of the new Ministers were present. The Cabinet will hold its first meeting this afternoon, when a circular telegram announcing the formation of the Cabinet will be drafted with an appeal for the support of the Provinces.

Mr. Wang Tah-hsieh was summoned to the Presidency at two o'clock yesterday afternoon and only agreed to form a Cabinet at four o'clock, after which the mandates were immediately drafted.

The mandate relieving Mr. Lo Wen-kan of his office was differently worded from the others, saying merely that Mr. Lo Wen-kan was thereby relieved of his office.

THREE GET START

Seventeen of the ponies started from scratch, but Mr. W. D. F. Wilson on Highland, Mr. C. R. W. Thompson on Shakedown, and Mr. V. D. K. Craddock on Big Ben were given 100 yards head start because of extra weight and extra initials.

Shakedown took the lead from the drop of the flag and held it to the ¾ pole, with the rest of the field running well spread out behind but rapidly catching up. At the Widow's Monument the leaders of the field had caught the three early starters and rounding into the stretch Mr. Craddock on Big Ben was the only early starter near the front. Big Ben had the rail and was going well but was unable to stand the pace when the Muckle Hoose riders on Conqueror Dahlia, Re-Organisation, Christmas Sale, and Keysoe stepped on the gas.

CONQUEROR DAHLIA WINS

Just in front of the cheering Muckle Hoose admirers in the stands and on the rails Mr. O'Brien said 'Giddap' and stepped out in front to win handily, followed by Mr. A. J. P. Heard on Christmas Sale, late Mikasa; Mr. A. N. Dallas on Re-Organisation, and Mr. John Johnstone on Keysoe.

Mr. E. B. Clarke on Glenae and Mr. D. C. McDonald on Paddy fought a fierce fight for Mow's tall honors, Mr. McDonald winning and ending up the field. The starters:

Mr. R. E. Toeg's Conqueror Dahlia (R. O'Brien)..162—1
Messrs. Fay and Seth's Christmas Sale (A. J. P. Heard) .....165—2
Mr. Day's Re-Organisation (A. N. Dallas) .....173—3

The officials were: Judge, Mr. Brodie A. Clarke; Assistant Judge, Mr. R. Mein Austin; Starter, Mr. N. W. Hickling; Assistant Starter, Mr. M. O. Springfield; Handicapper, Mr. W. R. Notes Of The Gridiron Battle showed a woeful lack of knowledge of football fundamentals. The few trick plays they had were useless.

Cal Hirsch was a valuable man for the Civilians. He played a roving center game and helped the greener line men diagnose plays. It was hardly necessary, though as Brewster did not look for weaknesses in his opponents' forwards.

Brewster played heady football in the third quarter. With the high wind behind him he kicked on the first down. The cits rushed. Again, when the schoolboys got the ball, Brewster punted. It was good football but the younger eleven had a couple of bad breaks. And then Kenny Irle grabbed that forward pass.

The schoolboys are good sportsmen. When the Cits had the ball but 19 yards from the goal line, the referee penalised the S. A. S. eleven fifteen yards, planting the leather but four yards distant from a touchdown. And it was first down. The spectators, nine tenths of whom were rooting for the kids, groaned. The official asked the schoolboy left half if he understood the reason for the penalty. The lad answered "Yes, Sir." There was not a murmur from any man on the team. And if you noticed carefully, that same left half d ve under the pile twice when the school forwards wavered. It was great stuff to see those young boys hold their heavier opponents fours yards from the line. Four rushes netted two yards.

The loss of Squires made the schoolboys fight harder.

Maloney made two beautiful dropkicks.

Schloss is a handy man on the end.

Jack Smith was pretty tired along about the middle of the fourth quarter, but he was full of fight.

Jerry Neal pulled off one sweet run.

Nearly 1,500 were at the game. A fair argument that the sport would "go" here. And a better argument for the schoolboys to stage their class games at the Race Course if possible instead of hiding their light at the Hongkew Park.

See you next Thanksgiving.

ANKING ELEVEN DEFEATS WUHU BY SCORE OF 2-1

All Scoring Done In First Half; Cubs See Chinese Boys Play

(China Press Correspondence)

Anking, Anhwei Nov. 26—Yesterday afternoon the soccer team of St. Paul's High School, Anking, defeated the team representing St. James High School, from Wuhu, by a score of two goals to one. The game as the score would indicate was closely fought, both teams showing a hard, clean attack and excellent defenso work. All the scoring was done in the first half. St. Paul's won the toss and took the west goal, with the wind at their back. By fast and clever work they scored the first goal in five minutes of play, and the second about ten minutes later. Then the St. James defense stiffened and from then on St. Paul's were unable to score, although it required great work on the part of the St. James fullbacks and goal keeper to cut off shots for goal. St. James School made their goal near the end of the first half after a brilliant rush nearly the length of the field.

The outstanding players for St. Paul's School were Captain Abraham Wang at inside right, John Hu at left wing, and Andrew Yeh at left half back. For St. James School Francis Wang at center forward, and David Lee at left wing, played excellently.

Most of the members of the foreign community saw the game, and several of the officers of the U. S. S. Isabel, flagship of the Yangtze patrol, which arrived Saturday morning and anchored off Anking, also were among the interested spectators.

St. Paul's School line-up: Left wing, John Hu: Inside left Luke Den: Center, Andrew Lo: Inside right, Captain Abraham Wang: Right wing, David Lin: Left half, Andrew Yeh: Centre half, Thomas Lo: Right half, Lincoln Chang: Left full, Frank Yin: Right full: Henry Chow: Goal, Abel Wei. Referee, Rev. J. K. Shryock of Anking.

On Dec. 2nd the St. Pauls team will play William Nast College at Kiukiang and endeavor to retrieve their defeat of last year.

Rotterdam Strike Costs Charterers Huge Demurrage

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 29.—The House of Lords by a majority today dismissed an appeal from the judgement of the Court of Appeal reversing an order of Mr. Justice McCardie affirming the award of an umpire in arbitration that the charterers of the steamers, Ambaticlos and Panaghis, from Java and Macassar respectively to Rotterdam must pay the owners £43,500 demurrage for detention due to the strike of the dockers at Rotterdam in 1920.

The House of Lords agreed with the Court of Appeal's view that the charterers were not liable because the detention was due to causes over which they had not control.

New York-London cross rate fluctuated daily between 446½ and 449⅜ and closed at 448⅜. The official T.T. rate rose from 3s. 2d. to 3s. 2⅛d. on 17th instant and on 20th advanced to 3s. 2⅛d. closing at this figure with sellers ½d. over that rate. T.T. G.$74 to 74¼. 4 m-s. Exports:—Quotations for cow hides are a little easier in accordance with the prevailing dull markets at home, and partly influenced by current exchange rates. Cotton appears weaker, while wood oil is firm. Further purchases of sesamum seed are reported at firm prices.

Imports:—Piece Goods: Prices show an improvement, especially for white shirtings. Clearances fair.

(China Press Correspondence)

Ningpo, Nov. 24.—The opening of the new building of the Baptist Woman's School near the Salt Gate was held this afternoon. The room was filled to overflowing with friends representing the different churches and Missions of the city, and also several of the gentry of Ningpo were in attendance. The program consisted of speeches, songs and musical drill's. Several speeches of congratulation were given after the regular program by guests present.

An opportunity to see the new building was given at the conclusion of the program after which refreshments were served to the guests.

Asia Banking Corporation
November 30, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver were each up 3-16d. in London yesterday. The New York price advanced to 64¼ cents and the London-New York cross rate declined to 451⅜.

The only change in our official quotations have today was a drop in the Yen rate to 70. Our market here was steady throughout the morning, becoming somewhat firm during the course of the day.

In the early part of the morning some business in Sterling was done at 3s. 1⅛d. for December delivery and 3s. 1⅝d. for January. Gold Dollars were done at 71⅛ for practically all deliveries up to June.

In the afternoon, however, the market firmed and business in Sterling was done at 3s. 1⅛d. for December-January delivery and in Gold Dollars at 71⅝ for the same delivery.

Just before the close the market eased off slightly, there being good buyers of Sterling for January and possibly December at 3s. 1⅝d. with sellers at ⅛ lower. There were buyers of Gold Dollars at 71⅝ for December at the close with sellers at this rate for January. There were sellers of Yen at 68½ for December-January and buyers at 68⅜.

Banks were quoting 3s. 2½d. for Sterling bills, 72⅜ for Gold Dollar bills and 1060 for Franc bills.

India bought silver in London yesterday and the market is reported as closing steady. No advice has been received from New York as to their market but our advices of November 27 quote the market as being firm with buyers and no sellers at the official rate.

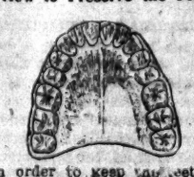
KINGMAN & BROS.
How to Preserve the Teeth



In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis, esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid powe of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr KINGMAN to the subscribers consist in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly.
(2) Filling with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

Rubber Restriction Plan Aids Repah Estate, Ltd.

An interesting company meeting arising out of the advantages from recent rubber restriction scheme was that of the Repah Rubber and Tapioca Estates, Ltd., held yesterday afternoon.

A resolution to liquidate the company was passed at the extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company held on September 22 last, when a cloud was hanging over the industry.

Now that the restriction scheme has come into force an attempt is being made to try and put the concern on its feet. An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders was called yesterday afternoon to make the resolution of September last null and void and to carry on the estate as heretofore.

The resolution was passed, and the managing agency will pass from Messrs. Hopkins Dunn and Co. Ltd. to Mr. Grayrigge, one of the Directors of this Rubber Company. The Company was incorporated in 1913.

At the meeting yesterday, the Chairman said:—

"Gentlemen—On the 22nd September last an extraordinary general meeting was held, at which, in view of the financial position it was resolved that the Company be liquidated. Since then, however, the compulsory restriction scheme has materialised, and Mr. Grayrigge, one of your Directors, has made arrangements for taking over the debenture of Tls. 60,000. held by Messrs. Hopkins, Dunn & Co. Ltd. so that the Company might be still able to carry on. Mr. Grayrigge has also offered to take over the agency and run it free of charge until such time as the financial position warrants other arrangements being made.

"In view of the fact that the existing agreement with Messrs. Hopkins, Dunn & Co., Ltd. as Secretaries and General Managers expires on the 1st January, 1923, the Board, being of the opinion that it will be for the benefit of the shareholders, have agreed to accept Mr. Grayrigge's offer on the terms proposed by him, so that as from the 1st January next he will act as Agent for the Company. That is all I have to say, gentlemen, and it now remains for some one to propose that the resolution to liquidate the company passed at the extraordinary general meeting held on 22nd September last be null and void and the Estate carry on as heretofore."

California Bans The Bible

THERE is fresh material for religious controversy of the sort the fundamentalists ought to enjoy in the decision of a California Court of Appeals that the King James version of the Bible is the gospel of a sect and therefore cannot be used in the public schools of that State. Mr. Bryan and his associates in the war on evolution base all their arguments on the infallibility of the King James translation. Yet it is now judicially ruled that there are other translations; that, in fact, not all Christians base their faith on the rendering which Mr. Bryan trusts; that the King James version is not a final authority among true believers.

This, of course, has always been obvious, but the courts have never before given to the Bible the same legal status as the Book of Mormon, Science and Health, the Talmud, the Koran and other sacred books, as the decision of the California court undoubtedly does. In so doing it prohibits from the schools of the State not alone the King James version but both other versions, the Douay and the Revised. It bars public instruction in Christianity altogether. This will shock many people, but the decision seems to be wholly in accord with the Constitution.

On the other hand, the King James Bible is a literary heritage from the days when Englishmen wrote great poetic prose. It has survived in spite of inaccuracies of translation because it is the greatest single piece of literature in the language. Aside from Shakespeare, there is nothing in any way comparable with it. It is a pity if it may not be studied for doctrine in California that it cannot be introduced merely as a classic. To miss it, is to miss the best instruction in the use of the mother tongue.

Gazing Backward

BY S. E. KISER

The shortest hour that I recall
Was not an hour I spent alone
Beside the fairest girl of all
On whom the sun has ever shone;
It was the hour before the one
In which I was to see her dad,
And offer to become his son,
And help to make his daughter glad.

Her softly answered little "yes"
Was not the word, I must admit,
That brought me greatest happiness,
Although it cheered me quite a bit;
The word that brought me greatest glee
Was that the pilot spoke when I Took off my goggles after we
Had done a zigzag from the sky.

The longest hour of all my life
I never shall, I'm sure, forget;
It was not when another's wife
And I lay 'neath a car, upset;
It was not where great armies clashed,
With shells exploding in the air,
Nor where wild billows madly splashed;
I spent it in a dentist's chair.

The loveliest girl I've ever seen
Was not upon the flaming page
Of any monthly magazine,
Nor on the screen nor on the stage;
While I held up my hands, one night—
A thing I hated much to do—
She came along and saw my plight,
And yelled "Police!" a time or two.

It does begin to look, as the Farmville Herald sez, that Turkey wins Thrace.

Yesterday being Thanksgiving we, purely and solely because it was 'the thing to do' proceeded to contract the annual tummy-ache w.k., among Americans. And with-al it was a pleasant contraction of pain. Those who merely saw us gobbling the turkey were pained also, but, of course, not in the same place.

PA JONGG SEZ:

Honest, This Is a Song!

The following song,' called 'The Mah Jongg Blues' is the latest masterpiece turned out by Tin Pan Alley, the New York center of song hits. Aside from showing the vogue mah jongg has reached in the United States we do not think it would cause any of the ancient bards to turn over in their graves. But read it yourself:

Pretty little Chinese maiden lived far away in Old Cathay.
Dreamy-eyed she sits alone all day
No one with her to play
Till at last there came a Mandarin
And to her his love he told in his arms this maid he did enfold
As to her these words he sang:
Come fly away to old Shanghai
where everyone plays Majongg
If you will be my Pung then I will be your Chow
And true to you I vow, while the murmuring bamboos gently sway
We will cuddle as we play, fascinating Majongg game
Be my pretty little Lotus Blossom
Neath the towering Chinese wall
this fall
And when you are my little wife
I'll teach you to play
Cause I have got those Majongg, syncopating Majongg blues.
CHORUS
Then this Chinese maiden blinked
her almond eyes
As the Chinese maidens do. Said
You Lovee me, I lovee you
I know you will be true and I'll be your loving Majongg wife
By and bye perhaps ther'll be a cunning little Majongg family
And you'll be the sweet Daddy

The Outlook For China

Some Steps Suggested By Which She Might Achieve Her Regeneration—Must Not Follow Occident Too Closely

Bertrand Russell writes in this article of means by which the regeneration of China might be achieved. His writings on China are the result of several months of residence and study in Peking and to them he brings the keen and critical intelligence for which he is known.

BY BERTRAND RUSSELL

(From The Century Magazine)

Last month I tried to suggest the mood in which I approached the study of China. In this paper I purpose to take, as far as I am able, the point of view of a progressive and public-spirited Chinese and consider what reforms, in what order, I should advocate in that case.

To begin with, it is clear that China must be saved by her own efforts and cannot rely upon outside help. In the international situation China has had both good and bad fortune. The Great War was unfortunate because it gave Japan temporarily a free hand; the collapse of czarist Russia was fortunate because it put an end to the secret alliance of Russians and Japanese; the Anglo-Japanese alliance was unfortunate, because it compelled us to abet Japanese aggression even against our own economic interests; the friction between Japan and America was fortunate, but the agreement arrived at by the Washington conference, though momentarily advantageous as regards Shantung, is likely, in the long run, to prove unfortunate, since it will make America less willing to oppose Japan. For reasons which I have often set forth unless China becomes strong, either the collapse of Japan or her unquestioned ascendency in the Far East is almost certain to prove disastrous to China, and one or other of these is very likely to come about. All the great powers, without exception, have interests which are incompatible, in the long run, with China's welfare and with the best development of Chinese civilisation. Therefore the Chinese must seek salvation in their own energy, not in the benevolence of any outside power.

CULTURAL INDEPENDENCE

The problem is not merely one of political independence; a certain cultural independence is at least as important. The Chinese are, I think, in certain ways superior to us, and it would not be good either for them or for us if in these ways they had to descend to our level in order to preserve their existence as a nation. In this matter, however, a compromise is necessary. Unless they adopt some of our vices to some extent, we shall not respect them, and they will be increasingly oppressed by foreign nations. The object must be to keep this process within the narrowest limits compatible with safety.

First of all a patriotic spirit is necessary; not, of course, the bigoted anti-foreign spirit of the Boxers, but the enlightened attitude which is willing to learn from other nations while not willing to allow them to dominate. This attitude has been generated among educated Chinese, and to a great extent in the merchant class, by the brutal tuition of Japan. The danger of patriotism is that, as soon as it has proved strong enough for successful defense, it is apt to turn to foreign aggression. China, by her resources and her population, is capable of being the greatest power in the world after the United States. It is much to be feared that, in the process of becoming strong enough to preserve their independence, the Chinese may become strong enough to embark upon a career of imperialism. It cannot be too strongly urged that patriotism should be only defensive, not aggressive. But, with this proviso, I think a spirit of patriotism is absolutely necessary to the regeneration of China. Independence is to be sought not as an end in itself but as a means toward a new blend of Western skill with the traditional Chinese virtues.

The three chief requisites I should say are: first, the establishment of an orderly government; second, industrial development under Chinese control; and, third, the spread of education. All these aims will have to be pursued concurrently, but, on the whole, their urgency seems to me to come in the above order. The state will have to take a large part in building up industry but this is impossible while the political anarchy continues. Funds for education on a large scale are also unobtainable until there is good government. Therefore good government is the prerequisite of all other reforms, industrialism and education are closely connected, and it would be difficult to decide the priority between them; but I have put industrialism first, because unless it Chinese, foreigners will have acquired such a strong hold that it will be very difficult indeed to oust them.

NECESSITY OF UNION

At the moment of writing the condition of China is as anarchic as it has ever been. So far as I can discover, Chinese Constitutionalists are doing the best thing that is possible at the moment; namely, concerting a joint program, involving the convoking of a parliament and the cessation of military usurpation. Union is essential, even if it involves sacrifice of cherished beliefs on the part of some. Given a program upon which all the Constitutionalists are united, they will acquire great weight in public opinion which is very powerful in China. They may then be able, sooner or later, to offer a high constitutional position to some powerful General on condition of his ceasing to depend upon mere military force. By this means they may be able to turn the scales in favor of the man they select, as the student agitation turned the scales in July, 1920, in favor of Wu pei-fu against the Anfu party. Such a policy can be successful only if it is combined with vigorous propaganda both among the civilian population and among the soldiers, and if, as soon as peace is restored, work is found for disbanded soldiers and pay for those who are not disbanded. This raises the financial problem, which is very difficult, because foreign powers will not lend except in return for some further sacrifice of the remnants of Chinese independence. I do not accept the statement by the American consortium bankers that a loan from them would not involve control over China's internal affairs. They may not mean control to be involved, but I am convinced that in fact it would be. The only way out of this difficulty that I can see is to raise an internal loan by appealing to the patriotism of Chinese merchants. There is plenty of money in China, but, very naturally, rich Chinese will not lend to any of the brigands who at the moment of writing control the Government.

FAVOR FEDERAL GOVT.

When the time comes to draft a permanent constitution, I have no doubt that it will have to be federal, allowing a very large measure of autonomy to the provinces and reserving for the Central Government few things except customs, army and navy, foreign relations and railways. Provincial feeling is strong, and it is now, I think, generally recognised that a mistake was made in 1912 in not allowing it more scope.

While a constitution is being drafted, and even after it has been agreed upon, it will not be possible to rely upon the inherent prestige of constitutionalism, or to leave public opinion without guidance. It will be necessary for the genuinely progressive people throughout the country to unite in a strongly disciplined society, arriving at collective decisions and enforcing support of those upon all its members. This society will have to win the confidence of public opinion by a very rigid avoidance of corruption and political profiteering; the slightest failure of a member in this respect must be visited by expulsion. The society must make itself obviously the champion of the national interests as against all self-seekers, speculators and toadies to foreign powers. It will thus become able authoritatively to commend or condemn politicians and to wield great influence over opinion even in the army. There exists in Young China enough energy, patriotism and honesty to create such a society and to make it strong through the respect which it will command.

Sooner or later, the encroachments of foreign powers upon the sovereign rights of China must be swept away. The Chinese must recover the treaty ports, control of the tariff, and so on; they must also free themselves from extra-territoriality. But all this can probably be done as it was in Japan, without offending any foreign powers except, perhaps, the Japanese. It would be a mistake to complicate the early stages of Chinese recovery by measures which would antagonise foreign powers in general. Russia was in a stronger position for defense than China, yet Russia has suffered terribly from the general hostility provoked by the Bolsheviks. Given good government and a development of China's resources, it will be possible to obtain most of the needed concessions by purely diplomatic means; the rest can wait for suitable opportunity.

FOR STATE OWNERSHIP

On this subject I have written elsewhere; it is certain general aspects of the subject that I wish to consider now. For reasons already given, I hold that all railways ought to be in the hands of the state, and that all successful mines ought to be purchased by the state at a fair valuation, even if they are not state-owned from the first. Contracts with foreigners for loans ought to be carefully drawn in order to leave the control to China. There would not be much difficulty about this if China had a stable and orderly government; in that case, many foreign capitalists would be willing to lend on good security without exacting any part in the management. Every possible diplomatic method should be employed to break down such a monopoly as the consortium seeks to acquire in the matter of loans.

Given good government, a large amount of state enterprise would be desirable in Chinese industry. There are many arguments for state socialism, or, rather, what Lenine calls state capitalism, in any country which is economically, but not culturally, backward. In the first place, it is easier for the state to borrow than for a private person; in the second place, it is easier for the state to engage and employ the foreign experts who are likely to be needed for some time to come; in the third place, it is easier for the state to make sure that vital industries do not come under the control of foreign powers. What is perhaps more important than any of these considerations is that, by undertaking industrial enterprise from the first, the state can prevent the growth of many of the evils of private capitalism. If China can acquire a vigorous and honest state, it will be possible to develop Chinese industry without at the same time developing the over-weening power of private capitalists by which the Western nations are now both oppressed and misled.

But if this is to be done successfully, it will require a great change in Chinese morals, a development of public spirit in place of the family ethics, a transference to the public service of that honesty which already exists in private business, and a degree of energy which is at present rare. I believe that Young China is capable of fulfilling these requisites, spurred on by patriotism; but it is important to realise that they are requisites and that without them any system of state socialism must fail.

For industrial development it is important that the Chinese should learn to become technical experts and also to become skilled workers. I think more has been done toward the former of these needs than toward the latter. For the latter purpose it would probably be wise to import skilled workmen, say from Germany, and cause them to give instruction to Chinese workmen.

UNIVERSAL EDUCATION

If China is to become a democracy, as most progressive Chinese hope, universal education is imperative. Where the bulk of the population cannot read, true democracy is impossible. Education is a good in itself, but is also essential for developing political consciousness, of which at present there is almost none in rural China. The Chinese themselves are well aware of this, but in the present state of the finances it is impossible to establish universal elementary education. Until it has been established for some time, China must be, in fact, if not in form, an oligarchy, because the uneducated masses cannot have any effective political opinion. Even given good government, it is doubtful whether the immense expense of educating such a vast population could be borne by the nation without a considerable industrial development. Such industrial development as already exists is mainly in the hands of foreigners, and its profits provide warships for the Japanese or mansions and dinners for British and American millionaires. If its profits are to provide the funds for Chinese education, industry must be in Chinese hands. This is another reason why industrial development must probably precede any complete scheme of education.

For the present even if the funds existed, there would not be sufficient teachers to provide a schoolmaster in every village. There is, however, such an enthusiasm for education in China that teachers are being trained as fast as is possible with limited resources; indeed, a great deal of devotion and public spirit is being shown by Chinese educators, whose salaries are usually months in arrears.

CHINESE MUST CONTROL

Chinese control is to my mind, as important in the matter of education as in the matter of industry. For the present it is still necessary to have foreign instructors in some subjects, though this necessity will soon cease. Foreign instructors, however provided they are not too numerous, do no harm, any more than foreign experts in railways and mines. What does harm is foreign management. Chinese educated in mision schools, or in lay establishments controlled by foreigners, tend to become denationalised and to have a slavish attitude toward Western civilisation. This unfits them for taking a useful part in the national life and tends to undermine their morals. Also, oddly enough, it makes them more conservative in purely Chinese matters than the young men and women who have had a modern education under Chinese auspices. Europeans in general are more conservative about China than the modern Chinese are and they tend to convey their conservatism to their pupils. And of course their whole influence unavoidably, if involuntarily, militates against national self-respect in those whom they teach.

Those who desire to do research in some academic subject will for some time to come need a period of residence in some European or American university; but for the great majority of university students it is far better, if possible, to acquire their education in China. Returned students have to a remarkable extent the stamp of the country from which they have returned, particularly when that country is America. A society such as was foreshadowed earlier in this paper, in which all really progressive Chinese should combine, would encounter difficulties, as things stand, from the divergencies in national bias between students returned from, say, Japan, America and Germany. Given time, this difficulty can be overcome by the increase in purely Chinese university education but at present the difficulty would be serious.

NEED INSPIRING LEADERSHIP

To overcome this difficulty, two things are needed: inspiring leadership, and a clear conception of the kind of civilisation to be aimed at. Leadership will have to be both intellectual and practical. As regards intellectual leadership, China is a country where writers have enormous influence and a vigorous reformer possessed of literary skill could carry with him the great majority of Young China. Men with the requisite gifts exist in China; I might mention, as an example personally known to me, Dr. Hu Suh. He has great learning, wide culture, remarkable energy, and a fearless passion for reform; his writings in the vernacular inspire enthusiasm among progressive Chinese. He is in favor of assimilating all that is good in Western culture, but is by no means a slavish admirer of our ways.

The practical political leadership of such a society as I conceive to be needed would probably demand different gifts from those required in an intellectual leader. It is therefore likely that the two could not be combined in one man but would need men as different as Lenine and Karl Marx.

The aim to be pursued is of importance not only to China, but to the world. Out of the renaissance spirit now existing in China it is possible, if foreign nations can be prevented from working havoc, to develop a new civilisation better than any that the world has yet known. This is the aim which Young China should set before itself: the preservation of the urbanity and courtesy, the candor and the pacific temper, which are characteristic of the Chinese nation together with a knowledge of Western science and an application of it to the practical problems of China. Of such practical problems there are two kinds: one due to the internal condition of China, and the other to its international situation. In the former class come education, democracy, the diminution of poverty, hygiene and sanitation, and the prevention of famines. In the latter class come the establishment of a strong government, the development of industrialism, the revision of treaties, and the recovery of the treaty ports (as to which Japan may serve as a model), and, finally, the creation of an army sufficiently strong to defend the country against Japan. Both classe of problems demand Western science, but they do not demand the adoption of the Western philosophy of life.

CHINESE AGGRESSION DANGE

If the Chinese were to adopt the Western philosophy of life, they would as soon as they had made themselves safe against foreign aggression, embark upon aggression on their own acount. They would repeat the campaigns of the Han and Tang dynasties in central Asia and perhaps emulate Kublai by the invasion of Japan They would exploit their material resources with a view to producing a few bloated plutocrats at home and millions dying of hunger abroad Such are the results which the West achieves by the application of science. If China were led astray by the lure of brutal power, she might repel her enemies outwardly, but would have yielded to them inwardly. It is not unlikely that the great military nations of the modern world will bring about their own destruction by their inability to abstain from war which will become with every year that passes, more scientific and more devastating.

If China joins in this madness, China will perish like the rest. But if Chinese reformers can have the moderation to stop when they have made China capable of self-defense and to abstain from the further step of foreign conquest; if, when they have become safe at home, they can turn aside from the materialistic activities imposed by the powers, and devote their freedom to science and art and the institution of a better economic system, then China will have played the part in the world for which she is fitted, and will have given to mankind as a whole new hope in the moment of greatest need. It is their hope that I wish to see inspiring Young China. This hope is realisable, and because it is realisable, China deserves a foremost place in the esteem of every lover of mankind.

Let Us Have An Observatory On The Equator

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest

Very strong arguments are presented by James H. Worthington in "Popular Astronomy," in favor of the selection of an elevated site exactly on the earth's equator for the next great astronomical observatory. I believe that he is entirely right in asserting that an observatory thus placed would possess advantages over all others for the study of the most popularly interesting of all astronomical objects—the sister planets of the earth—as well as of the nearest of all celestial objects, the moon.

On the equator one sees, as can be done nowhere else, the whole sky from pole to pole. The paths of all the planets cross the middle of the sky, nearly over the observer's head, which is the ideal location for telescopic study, because of the relative shallowness of the atmosphere through which one has to look, and because of the elimination of the effects of atmospheric refraction and absorption. By placing the telescope at a high elevation these advantages would be increased.

Mr. Worthington affirms that the ideal site thus described is found near the city of Quito in Peru, at an elevation of 9,500 feet, which is much higher than any existing observatory (that of Mount Wilson is 5,900), and that this site is easily accessible by rail from Guayaquil, 200 miles distant. Quito city is distant 14 miles. Owing to the elevation the climate, although the place is directly on the equator, is moderate, the temperature ranging between 40 and 75 degrees Fahrenheit. The rainfall is also moderate.

On the equator the duration of twilight is briefer than anywhere else, thus giving a maximum amount of nocturnal darkness. The sun passes exactly overhead at the equinoxes, and is never farther from the zenith at noon than 23½ degrees, alternating at the June and December ("Summer" and "Winter") solstice.

Thus the zodiac, which contains the paths of the planets, is always seen either passing through the zenith, or arching the sky not far north or south of the zenith. The advantages thus offered for study of the details of the planets are self-evident. The same advantage is presented for study of the moon's surface, and for the observation of comets when they are near the sun.

Only a few weeks ago a lady who happened to see Halley's comet from the Andes near Quito gave me, from her notes, a description of its magnificence that seemed to one who had beheld the same object, at the same time, from our northern latitudes, almost incredible. But all observers of the sky from the equatorial regions of South America are in accord about the immense superiority of the views there to be had of the heavenly bodies.

Mr. Worthington advocates the construction for this site of a telescope of special form, the object-glass being fixed in a horizontal position, with its optical axis parallel with the axis of the earth, while the northern and southern halves of the sky-dome are respectively rendered visible by means of inclined plain mirrors.

In 1924 there will be an exceedingly favorable opposition of the planet Mars, when its distance from the earth will be reduced to less than 36,000,000 miles. This will be an extraordinary occasion for the study of the great Mars problem, viz. the question of the existence and meaning of its "canals," and that of the habitability of the red planet by intelligent creatures, perhaps exceeding ourselves in intellectual and physical power.

If it could be settled that Mars really has such inhabitants an irresistible impulsion would instantly be given to the now half-hearted thoughts that many entertain about the practicability of communication with those extraordinary inhabitants of a foreign world. And, whether successful or not, efforts to settle that question would certainly be enormously stimulated by giving the observers the advantages of such a site for their instruments as the neighborhood of Quito offers.

Mr. Worthington simply says that the cost of the desired observatory would be "moderate," but he mentions no sum of money. Possibly a hundred thousand dollars might be sufficient. But what is a hundred thousand dollars, or two hundred thousand, in this age! I hear of sums of similar magnitude being spent to produce a motion picture spectacle, and if the picture is not a success, the promotors do not appear to be ruined—they simply try over again.

Now, here is a great astronomical problem, full of the most amazing and entrancing possibilities—a thing fit to furnish the greatest sensation of all the ages, and to immortalise the name of every man associated with it, if success is attained, but in which failure would involve no disgrace. Why, then, should the money not step forth, and cap its donator with unperishing honor!

Air Power At The Dardanelles

BY W. F. FULLAM

Rear Admiral, U. S. N. (Retired)

Air power, if employed at the Dardanelles, will dominate the situation and dictate the result if the Turks and the English come to blows in the existing emergency.

The French and Italians have evacuated Asia Minor, leaving a small British army at Chanak on the eastern bank of the Dardanelles. The Turks have seized Ezine, near by, and threaten Kum Kalessi, which commands the entrance to the Straits. If they seize this latter point of vantage, mount heavy guns and plant mines they can bar the Straits against the British fleet or hold it captive in the Sea of Marmora should it enter without first securing possession of the eastern shores and driving Turkish batteries back out of range. In other words, the British fleet unaided cannot protect the small English force at Chanak, nor can it hold the Straits against heavy field guns. Time and again history has proved that ships cannot reduce forts nor silence heavy guns mounted and screened on shore.

Ships cannot endure the plunging fire of big guns. Their decks are not armored to keep out shells falling at a big angle. The Queen Mary was destroyed at Jutland at a range of 19,500 yards—eleven statute miles—by a plunging salvo. In the same manner heavy field guns mounted on high bluffs, even if they did not actually sink a battleship, would drive it from an anchorage or bar it from a narrow channel.

A little reflection will demonstrate that air power—heavy bombing planes, torpedo planes and mine-laying planes—will dominate sea power, smash forts and drive field guns from positions of vantage. This is the situation at the Dardanelles. English admirals have admitted that the Allied fleets and armies could never have attacked the Dardanelles in the World War nor landed a man at Gallipoli if the Turks had commanded the air with a big force of planes. This fact will be clear to any layman.

Moreover, if the Allies had possessed an air force with modern bombs they would unquestionably have sunk the Goben and Breslau, reduced the Turkish forts, penetrated to Constantinople, succored Russia, and won the war. Their air forces were weak, their bombs were improvised. They failed for this reason.

But today the case is different. Bombs and bombing have been developed. The army and navy air forces of the United States, as they exist today, could drive a fleet out of the Dardanelles, smash the defending forts and drive the Turkish army back far into Asia Minor! The recent bombing tests against the German ships justify this declaration.

Reports are conflicting as to the strength of the English air forces. Debates in Parliament have stated that the force is pitiably weak and inadequate. This has been declared an exaggeration. We know, however, that the English government regards the situation as unsatisfactory and has recently moved to greatly augment its air forces. Mesopotamia is being largely policed by squadrons of airplanes, and it is reported today that British air squadrons are now being sent to Gallipoli. If this is true England has taken the one and the only step that will enable the British fleet and the small army at Chanak to hold the situation against the Turks if the latter decide to advance. It is assumed that the Turks have an insignificant air force, if any. In this event the British flyers can prevent the establishment of Turkish guns at Kum Kalessi or elsewhere, and the fleet will control the Straits and prevent the Turks from crossing to Constantinople.

Exchange Market

In their weekly report on the exchange market, Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows:

Exchange:—The London price of silver for spot at 31⅞d. is ⅜d. down, the price for forward delivery at 31⅝d. is ⅛d. lower than last week. Advices from London point to lower rates in silver. Our official rate for T.T. on London has followed silver with a drop of ⅝d. to 2s. 1d. Our exchange market has daily had spasmodic periods of strength based on the operations of local gold dealers, but with weakness in silver and the absence of genuine cover in the shape of export bills the tendency of our exchange is to lower rates. After strength, our market closes with an easier tone with T.T. on London at about 2s. 1⅛d. and G.$ at 70.¾

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 35,208,000, a decrease of Tls. 1,867,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $28,420,000, an increase of $1,790,000.

Estimated value Tls. 61,430,000 as against Tls. 44,513,000 held at this time last year.

Messrs. R. N. Truman and Company have received the following telegram from their Singapore Agents in connection with the auctions held there on Nov. 29.

Average price realised:
No. 1 Smoked Sheet $0.47 per pound equivalent to 1s. 1¼d. ex warehouse Singapore.
No. 1 Crepe $0.46¾ per pound equivalent to 1s. 1¼d. ex warehouse Singapore.
Market steady. Offered 404 tons; sold 252 tons.

Freight Market

In their fortnightly report on the freight market, Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows:

The improvement in the export trade to Europe and America, noted in our last issue, continues in a general way except that there is not much cargo moving across the Pacific.

To United Kingdom and Continent:—The China Homeward Conference has increased the rates on cereals and oil by about 20 percent as from the 22nd inst., and it is interesting to note that these rates are practically on a pre-war basis.

Coastwise:—Present conditions on the coast are quiet as, owing to the close of the season, the demand from Newchwang and Antung has now ceased, otherwise trade on the regular routes is being well maintained.

Weekly Review Of Shanghai Markets

RAW SILK

The raw silk market during the week has been extremely quiet, with very little business passing through.

American buyers have taken a few lots of steam filature, but business with Europe has been extremely difficult due to the fluctuating exchange and the disparity between the prices offered by buyers and those obtaining on the Shanghai market.

Rates are unchanged since last week, Chinese holders sticking to their prices. Some 350 bales of medium grade steam filature were bought this week for the United States.

Tussah filature is quiet as well, and the market is inclined to take a slight dip downward. No business in tussah filature was reported this week.

Exchange with Europe has been moving up and down rather rapidly, thus making it difficult to put business through.

The Yokohama silk market is weak as well, and indications point to a continued weakness in the near future. American buyers are reported to be still hesitating in making purchases. The majority of export buyers in the Japanese silk market are withholding their hands at the present moment.

WHEAT AND FLOUR

The quotation on the Flour Exchange during the week declined slightly but has since appreciated a little standing yesterday at Tls. 2.05 per sack. The local mills are quoting about Tls. 2.17 for spot cargo.

Arrivals of American flour from the United States Pacific ports have been abundant during the week, some 4,000 tons being landed here this week.

American sellers are quoting at G.$1.45 per sack cif Shanghai, which means Tls. 2.05 per sack. Business is being done on the basis of Tls. 1.92 for American flour for spot delivery.

No fresh trade in American flour was reported this week. The arrivals of wheat from the Pacific Coast ports are by no means small, this week alone 4,000 tons having been consigned to Shanghai. As in the case of American flour, there is no fresh trading in American wheat. Chinese buyers' idea is G.$42 per ton, while manufacturers in the United States are demanding G.$45 per ton. Under such circumstances it is, therefore, not surprising that business is practically impossible.

Stocks of flour in the Shanghai market, of flour manufactured by the local mills out of Chinese and American wheat, are about 100,000 sacks.

It is expected that the price of Chinese flour will go up shortly, but not until importation of the commodity ceases from the United States. All the contract cargo has practically come through, and it follows when all this stuff is consumed the demand will be created for flour for which supplies on the Shanghai market will be scanty to supply the needs.

It is likely that Canadian mills will be getting the trade in flour that had in previous months gone to the Pacific Northwest, as they are underselling the latter to the extent of 75 cents gold per barrel. Hongkong, Shanghai and Tientsin have been asking the Pacific Northwest mills for bids as far ahead as March, but inview of the rapid disappearance of the limited crop of the Pacific Northwest the millers there are unwilling to hazard a guess as to the future level of Pacific wheats. The spring wheat crop is already practically exhausted, and stocks of soft white wheats in American farmers' hands are very light in most districts. Red wheats are still in fairly liberal supply, but this is not suitable for the China market.

The China demand for Canadian flour has been fairly good and it is reported that during the next few months the movement from Vancouver to the Orient will be approximately 4,000 tons per month. Flour and grain shipments from Vancouver for the month of September were as follows: flour, to the Orient 101,000 sacks, to France 2,500; bran, to the Orient, 21,008; wheat, to the Orient, 20,000; oats, to the Orient, 1,300.

SUGAR

The Shanghai sugar market for the past three weeks has been entirely flat, very little business being reported as transacted. The Chinese sugar merchants are sitting on the fence. One can hardly blame them for this attitude, as exchange is very unfavorable for the importation of the commodity from Japan.

The disparity in prices—and by that is meant that which the buyer is prepared to accept and the refiners willing to sell their stuff at—is very sharp, as much as a yen per picul.

Arrivals from Japan average at present some 5,000 bags of refined sugar. Stocks in Shanghai comprise some 90,000 bags of Japanese sugar and about 50,000 bags of Hongkong sugar.

The rate ruling in the market today is Tls. 7.45 per picul for spot cargo, Tls. 7.60 for delivery in the middle of next month and Tls. 7.90 for the end of December.

The market in Java is steady, December-January delivery being quoted at 18¼ guilders. Java merchants sold some 4,000 tons of the new crop white sugar at 13 guilders, and 10,000 tons of moscovada at 11¾ guilders, the principal buyers being Japanese.

Sugar prices in Japan have taken a general rise and the possibilities that the manufacturers in that country will be able to bring about a general move to boost the price still further are much stronger than has been the case in the recent past. This sudden animation in sugar circles in Japan—a group that has been idle for two years—is the result of the plan to restrict output.

It is feared that in case the Japanese supply is restricted and prices advanced, a flood of cheap Cuban sugar would be imported into Japan, which would drive the Japanese refiners to abandon their scheme. The sugar manufacturers in that country have decided to restrict the Japanese supply to 45,000 koku, which has naturally served to buck the market up.

In Tokio centrifugal sugar duty paid is quoted at yen 19.10 and refined sugar at yen 26.30 per picul. Japanese merchants are not inclined to sell below these prices.

The London market is firm, the consumption increasing steadily. Larger quantities of sugar from Germany and France are pouring into Great Britain at present. There is increased consumption in the United States as well. The large importations of Continental sugar into Great Britain are due to the advantages in exchange. It is not expected that prices will go down much.

Cables from New York state that refiners have re-entered the market and have been compelled to pay ½ percent higher, a fair amount of spot cargo having been bought at 5.65 cents gold. Buyers nevertheless are inclined to be cautious and are not placing orders ahead.
